Course Description:

This course explores the dynamics, challenges and prospects of development practice and theory in Latin America, both historically and in the 21st Century. Beginning with the late 19th Century liberal belle epoch era the course maps the development trajectory of Latin America through the ISI period into the military dictatorships of the mid-20th Century into the return to democracy, and finally the rise of left and left-of-centre democratic regimes in the 21st Century. At each stage fine grained empirical analysis is complemented with the theoretical models and strategies of each development experience, combined with concrete case studies into specific Latin American countries.

Prerequisites: MA International Relations and MA International Development students only

Aims and Objectives

- To develop an analytical understanding of key themes and concepts informing the political economy of development in Latin America;

- To examine major theoretical explanations and academic debates relating to the political economy of development in Latin America;
- To apply theory in evaluating the progress in the implementation of different development strategies in Latin America;
- To identify exemplary case studies in Latin America and to critically evaluate their history and contemporary practices in implementing different development strategies.

Programme Outcomes:

LEVEL 7 A, B, C, D, E, G

A detailed list of the programme outcomes are found in the Programme Specification.

Assessment:

This course conforms to the Richmond University Standard Assessment Norms approved at Learning and Teaching Policy Committee found at:
<http://www.richmond.ac.uk/content/academic-affairs/academic-standing.aspx>.

Teaching Methodology:

The course will consist of weekly postgraduate seminars, which will follow the structure set out within the course syllabus and will serve a number of functions: seminars provide a framework for the course; address critically the relevant literature in specific areas, examine concepts, theories and case studies, and enable students to engage in group discussion and dialogue, and autonomous learning. Seminars rely upon active student participation, mediated by the Course instructor. By examining and discussing issues and problems in a seminar setting, students as junior research colleagues will be able to learn from each other and resolve questions that arise in the course of the lectures and readings. Seminars will only be useful to the extent that they are prepared for and participation in discussions and debates is an essential aspect of this. All students will be required to participate. Tutorial opportunities will also be available for research supervision and other academic support.
