Course Description:

Engages with African development politics in the post-colonial era. The ideologies and strategies of promoting development are assessed, along with the problems and difficulties faced in on this continent. Beginning with the colonial legacy, the course addresses social, political and economic structures and transformations that have taken place. Both domestic and international factors are considered, with empirical cases and theoretical concepts being given equal weighting in the exploration of these issues. The relationship between state and civil society, and the consequences of this for development, is a key theme of the course.

Prerequisites: MA International Relations and MA International Development students only

Aims and Objectives

- To develop an analytical understanding of key themes and concepts informing the political economy of development on the African continent;
- To examine major theoretical explanations and academic debates relating to the political economy of development in Africa;

- To apply theory in evaluating the progress in the implementation of different development strategies in Africa;
- To identify exemplary case studies in Africa and to critically evaluate their history and contemporary practices in implementing different development strategies.

Programme Outcomes:

LEVEL 7 A, B, C, D, E, G

Assessment:

This course conforms to the Richmond University Standard Assessment Norms approved at Learning and Teaching Policy Committee found at:

<http://www.richmond.ac.uk/content/academic-affairs/academic-standing.aspx>

Teaching Methodology:

The course will consist of weekly postgraduate seminars, which will follow the structure set out within the course syllabus and will serve a number of functions: seminars provide a framework for the course; address critically the relevant literature in specific areas, examine concepts, theories and case studies, and enable students to engage in group discussion and dialogue, and autonomous learning. Seminars rely upon active student participation, mediated by the Course instructor. By examining and discussing issues and problems in a seminar setting, students as junior research colleagues will be able to learn from each other and resolve questions that arise in the course of the lectures and readings. Seminars will only be useful to the extent that they are prepared for and participation in discussions and debates is an essential aspect of this. All students will be required to participate. Tutorial opportunities will also be available for research supervision and other academic support.
