Course Description:

This course will explore the vibrant genre tradition of fantastic and non-realist writing using a range of critical approaches. The first half of the course will survey some of the major texts on which modern Fantasy literature draws, including Beowulf, Arthurian texts and selections from works by Shakespeare, Milton, Jane Austen and Lewis Carroll. The second half of the course will focus more intensively on a few major fantasies from the past 120 years and their filmed adaptations, including works by Bram Stoker, J.R.R. Tolkien, and J.K. Rowling, and will look at how these texts and their filmic counterparts repurpose and revision older ideas for novel purposes.

Prerequisites: ARW 4195

Aims and Objectives:

- To explain how modern genre Fantasy fits into a long and varied literary traditions;
- To study the advantages and disadvantages of writing in a mode or a genre, and of categorizing writing by its mode or genre;

- To examine intertextuality in literary history and practice;
- To engage with a range of different critical approaches;
- To study the significance of the relationship between Fantasy and popular British culture, and to recognise the impact which the genre has on Britain's contemporary identity, culture and creative industries.
